OPEN SPACE TECHNOLOGY

This practical training will help you understand Open Space Technology and the principles and dynamics that underpin it. You'll also learn how to facilitate Open Space events.

The training will be delivered by two experienced Open Space facilitators and trainers - Viv McWaters and Andrew Rixon. Both use Open Space Technology extensively in their consulting businesses.

It's helpful if you have experienced an Open Space event and have read the book Open Space Technology: A User's Guide by Harrison Owen. It is a practical 'how to' book that is easy to read in just a couple of sittings. Our training will tell you what the book doesn't! Other information about Open Space Technology can be found at www.openspaceworld.org

What's included?

You'll receive a comprehensive set of notes, training in a small group by two experienced, world-class facilitators, and lunches and morning and afternoon teas. An informal dinner in Brunswick Street will be organised for Wednesday night for those who are interested (at own cost).

Learning Outcomes

At the end of this training you should:

- Have a good understanding of the process of Open Space and the philosophy that underpins it
- Know when it's appropriate to use Open Space Technology
- Be prepared to organise and facilitate an event using Open Space Technology
